BOLIVIA ALPINE MOUNTAINEERING
6,200M / 20,341FT

2020 EXPEDITION TRIP NOTES
The Cordillera Real of Bolivia is one of the world’s major ranges and offers some of the finest and most varied alpine climbing. Our Bolivia programme allows for significant instruction time while completing some fantastic climbs at low-intermediate grade at altitudes up to 6,200m/20,340ft.

For those who would like the experience of climbing in an uncrowded area, exploring a remote and exotic land leaving a minimal impact, the Cordillera Real offers an unparalleled opportunity.

A five-day ascent of the massive Nevado Illimani (6,438m/22,401ft) is an ideal add-on to capitalise on your existing acclimatisation and make this expedition even more enjoyable. It is the highest peak in Bolivia’s Cordillera Real and allows you to climb a serious high altitude peak without the hardships of climbing in very low temperatures.

HISTORY

The Cordillera Real of Bolivia is one of the world’s major ranges and offers some of the finest and most varied alpine climbing. However, due to the country’s remoteness and its lack of any traditional tourism, the Cordillera Real is probably the least known and least climbed range among comparable mountain groups. As a result, for those who are used to climbing and backpacking in wilderness areas, for whom the experience of a minimally impacted and uncrowded area is important, and who find great appeal in exploring a remote and exotic land, the Cordillera Real is an ideal destination.

HOW THE EXPEDITION OPERATES

After spending two days in the city of La Paz, we head north to the central region of the Cordillera Real. We begin our trek and travel over a series of valleys and passes over the period of three days, and enjoy camping out each night. This is an opportunity to take in the scenery and enjoy spotting the native wildlife. The final day of trekking ends in Plaza de Llama, where a vehicle is waiting to transport us back to La Paz. The team will have a day in La Paz to prepare for the next stage of the adventure.
The next day we visit the Tiwanaku Archeological Site, a ruined ancient city near Lake Titicaca. Dominating the ruins of this UNESCO World Heritage site, once the seat of the pre-Columbian Tiwanaku culture, are the Akapana pyramid and a semi-subterranean temple with carved images of human heads. Nearby Kalasasaya is an open temple with stone monoliths and the huge Gate of the Sun arch.

In the afternoon we drive east from the lake to the foot of the central Cordillera Real and then to a trailhead, where we meet our llamas and support staff to camp for the night. With the animals carrying the bulk of our gear, we make an easy-paced ascent to our Base Camp at 4,572m/15,000ft. The trek takes us through some beautiful valley landscapes and our camp provides excellent views of the many surrounding mountains and puts us in a position to make a series of single-day ascents. During the first days of the program, we tailor our schedule of instruction and practice climbing to suit the needs of the participants acclimatising at different rates. We give instruction in climbing technique on a glacial practice area near our camp, while team members gradually acclimatise to the higher altitudes, and then cover additional skills in the process of making summit climbs. We make a beautiful short trek to the Condoriri Lake District and here we make two ascents on 5,180m/17,000ft and 5,486m/18,000ft peaks. This area includes two of the most beautiful mountains on the continent, Cerro Condoriri and Pequeño Alpamayo.

Our approach is once again made easy by the help of llamas, and we set up camp near a lake below the magnificently sculptured white tower of Condoriri. We practice additional climbing and rescue techniques, and then make our first major climb; most likely of the beautiful Pyramide Blanca. After a day of rest or more practice climbing, we tackle our primary goal in this group, Pequeño Alpamayo; a hidden peak with a very impressive pyramidal summit. We climb a broad glacier to a col, traverse along a ridge to the base of the summit pyramid and then ascend directly to the top. The entire route is photogenic, offers excellent climbing and makes use of all the skills taught earlier in the program.

We then move south past a series of colourful altiplano lakes to the Zongo Pass, right at the very foot of Huayna Potosi (approximately 6,088m/19,974ft), from which we take a full day to establish a high camp at 5,500m/18,000ft. Setting off from camp the following morning with sunrise over the Amazon Basin to our east, we climb a beautiful route which includes serious glacier travel and intermittent sections of moderately steep ground - challenging climbing but well within the skill level developed by the climbing team during the preceding days of the program. With Huayna Potosi’s summit, a well-defined point at the end of a beautifully sculptured ridge and the last few steps to the top provide an exhilarating finish to a great climb.

Following our ascents, we return to La Paz and either depart for home, or for those also undertaking the optional Illimani Ascent, begin preparations for the next stage of the expedition.

ILLIMANI ASCENT ADD ON

We leave the city travelling Southeast over very rugged roads to a small settlement, where we meet our Arriero and his llamas. With our gear loaded, we climb gradually higher while enjoying brilliant views of Illimani and eventually pass through the isolated village, where our Arriero and his family live. Here Aymara life is very traditional with thatch-roofed homes constructed of mud brick and stone, and villagers busy attending to the soaking, drying, and freezing of their potatoes—in what must be the world’s original freeze-drying process.

We climb above the village and establish Base Camp at a small lake at 4,600m/15,000ft, where in the evening we enjoy the beautiful view of the sunset over the Altiplano.

The next day our Arriero returns with members of his family, who help us as porters. With them, we make a 915m/3,000ft ascent up trails and a rock ridge to reach a snowy bench at 5,500m/18,000ft, where we establish our high camp. From this camp, we get great views into the enormous, steep-walled cirque of Illimani and across Lake Titicaca into Peru. The next morning we begin our ascent of the peak’s steep Southwest Buttress. The route is broken by a series of large crevasses and we carefully zig-zag our way up, using snow bridges and ice ramps where we can to shorten our route.
Eventually, we climb a 40 to 45-degree glacial face and gain the final ridge to the summit. A gently rising, exposed and very photogenic finish that provides some of the finest views in the Andes. Always scenic and offering rewardingly varied alpine climbing, this is an exciting expedition on one of South America’s greatest peaks.

PREREQUISITE EXPERIENCE

To climb in Bolivia you need to be physically fit, have a strong mental stamina and be capable of strenuous exercise for several days’ duration. Expedition members need to be capable of carrying a moderate pack.

Climbing at altitude affects people differently; most climbers notice a lower performance rate than normal. Our climbing days are mostly short to accommodate this and vital rest days are usually welcomed! Our graduated acclimatisation program allows you to progressively consolidate your fitness.
